

FORGER OF SCOTT COUNTY LOCATED

Word Received That Charles Calvert is in an Asylum for the Insane in Australia.

Letter From His Alleged Wife and Inquiry is Made Concerning His Relatives.

The first information regarding the whereabouts of Charles Calvert, the well known timber dealer of Scottsburg, who disappeared more than five years ago after forging thousands of dollars worth of checks, has been received by the Scottsburg State Bank. The information came through a letter which was mailed in Australia, and states that the man is in the asylum for the insane. Calvert left Scottsburg on Saturday night, July 13, 1907, and less than a month afterwards the doors of the People's State Bank at Brownstown were closed and upon examination $7,000 of Calvert's worthless paper was found in the vaults.

The letter was addressed to the "Manager of the Scottsburg Bank," but was opened by John Hooker, cashier of the Scottsburg State Bank. It read as follows:

166 Lygon Street, Carlton, Melbourne, Victoria, Oct. 12.—The Manager Scottsburg Bank, Scottsburg, Ind., U. S. A.—Dear Sir: I have been advised by Patrolman J. S. Long, of Buechel, Ky., to write you for the information I desire of one, Charles Calvert, alias John Kelley. He arrived in Western Australia in September 1907, entered into business relations with myself and we came on to Victoria and took a hotel (saloon) in the "states." We continued in that business three years. He was drinking heavily continually, however. We were married on the 14th day of December, 1911, he filling in the register as John Kelley, bachelor, of Fisherville, Ky. About last April he became ill and after consulting several doctors, he was informed that he could not live much longer. He stated that back in the "states" Drs. McClain & McCalvert had attended him. John Kelley, or Calvert, has asked me to write to that doctor for information with respect to his family and one Nobe Williams, whom he frequently spoke of.

My reason for inquiring is that Calvert is in a public institution known here as the Asylum for Insane. He is suffering from paralysis in a very advanced stage and is not expected to live twelve months and may have a stroke at any time. He is continually asking me about his wife and child, also his brother, named Bert or Bueche, he having broken his leg at one time. I might say that I have had his photograph taken for identification purpose, but they are not finished in time for this mail. I believe Nobe Williams belongs to Crothersville, Ind.

Who had the winding up of Calvert's estate? He is penniless and while he was getting ill he gave his money away indiscriminately and when I came to investigate his affairs, I found that he had left me 400

Buys Fine Home.

E. C. Bollinger as agent today closed a deal with Wm. B. Gallemore of the Seymour Ice Cream Factory, for the H. R. Kyte property on N. Walnut street for $5,000.00. Dr. Kyte reserves possession of the property until March 1st, 1913, at which time Mr. Gallemore will make some extensive improvements on the property and make this his home.

The business at the Ice Cream Factory has grown so in the past few years that it is necessary for Mr. Gallemore to give it his personal attention and for this reason he decided to make this his home.

DATES ANNOUNCED FOR INSTITUTES

Regular Meetings Will be Held at Seven Places in the County—Short Course in Seymour.

STRONG PROGRAMS ARRANGED

County Chairman Urges That Farmers Work Together to Make Each Session a Success.

Seven farmers' institutes will be held in Jackson county this winter under the auspices of the agricultural extension department of Purdue University. The farmers' short course will be held at Seymour November 21-23 and for this reason the regular institute will not be conducted here. The University has carried out the plan of holding only the short course or the institute at one place during the winter. The short course here necessitates a rearrangement of the time for the Brownstown and Medora institutes. Under the schedule they will be held at the following places upon the given dates:

- Cortland, December 2.
- Washington Township, December 3.
- Crothersville, December 6.
- Vallonia, December 6-7.
- Freetown, December 7.
- Medora, December 19-20.
- Brownstown, December 20-21.

A lady speaker has been assigned to the work in the state and home talent has been arranged for on the apparently conflicting dates. The institutes are regarded as highly instructive and valuable and are well attended. Much interest has been shown in the institutes and especially in the short course as this is the first ever held in this county.

In speaking of the value of the institutes the county chairman says:

With a few words of encouragement to the local farmers' institute association let me say that the extension department of Purdue is deeply interested, as we should be, in the success of every institute. They are interested in broadening our field of knowledge and usefulness and help us in our rural endeavors and promote the improvement and advancement of agriculture; domestic and rural life.

We know that every honest person must gain his living by the sweat of his brow, physically or mentally, and back of that sweating brow there must be knowledge and brain force and knowledge when put into practical use is wisdom. Then should we not seek and utilize the knowledge that the Extension Department endeavors to present to us. They have done their part in advising us, arranging the schedules and assigning competent speakers, each of whom has a scientific, useful and clear-cut message of progress pertaining to our vocation and it is up to us to do our part in helping the good cause along by getting everyone interested to lend a helping hand in that which is a mutual benefit to all. The greater the interested numbers that can be called together at these institutes the greater the inspiration of speaker and all.

In our displays of farm and home products, where such is to be made, whether competitive or not, let it be educational, instructive, entertaining or amusing. Then when the institutes are over we will all feel that we have been repaid for our trouble to make them a success.

WANT CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL

Taxpayers of Driftwood Township Suing Their Advisory Board.

The people of School Districts Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, of Driftwood township, are suing the advisory board of Driftwood township for favorable action on their petition to build a consolidated school house and for the appropriation of $10,000 for this purpose.

The title of the case is the State of Indiana, ex rel. William Dieckmeyer vs. the Advisory Board of Driftwood Township. The residents of School Districts Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 filed a petition some time ago with their advisory board asking them to consolidate the schools of these districts and to appropriate $10,000 for the purpose of putting up a suitable building for the consolidated school. The board refused to grant the petition and the suit has been brought in the circuit court asking them to compel them to act favorably on the petition and to make the appropriation.

About forty residents of the township are attending court today and will be called as witnesses in the case which will probably occupy two days before the evidence and the argument can be completed. The case is being tried before the jury.

Branaman & Branaman are attorneys for the petitioners and Lewis and Swails for the advisory board.

FREIGHT WRECK ON S. I.

Rear End Collision Near Lewis This Morning.

Regular freight train No. 26 ran into the rear end of an extra freight train a short distance this side of Lewis on the C. T. H. & S. E. this morning. The engine and several cars of freight were badly damaged. The track was piled full of wreckage and one freight car was standing on its end. No one was hurt so far as information has reached Seymour.

The passenger train due here from the west at 11:00 did not reach Seymour until 1:40 this afternoon. The train ran down to Lewis, then backed to Black Hawk and was detoured over the Sullivan branch and the Illinois Central.

The wrecking crew from Terre Haute was called at once and the work of clearing the track was begun, but it will probably be late this afternoon before trains can pass the scene of the wreck.

Organ Recital.

A musical event of more than usual importance is promised to the people of Seymour at the St. Paul church at 8 o'clock this evening. Prof. W. S. Sterling, Dean of the Metropolitan School of Music, of Cincinnati, will give an organ recital. In the program he will be assisted by several of the best musicians of Seymour. Some of our musicians have studied under Prof. Sterling, so that he does not come as a stranger to Seymour but as one whose work is known. The musical this evening will doubtless be enjoyed by all who hear it.

Funeral Services.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Louise Pottschmidt, who died at Jonesville, Monday morning, will be held from the residence at 9 o'clock and from the German Lutheran church in this city at 1 o'clock. The services will be in charge of Rev. George Baumgart. Burial at German Lutheran cemetery.

SPANISH PREMIER IS ASSASSINATED

Joe Canalejas Shot at Madrid by Man Giving Name as Manuel Pardinas.

SLAYER THEN KILLS HIMSELF

Canalejas Had Brought About Many Reforms Notably New Laws Regarding Laboring Class.

Madrid, Spain, November 12.—The Spanish Premier, Jose Canalejas, was assassinated in Madrid today. The assassin was captured by the police and later committed suicide. He gave the name of Manuel Pardinas Serrato Martin and said he was a native of El Grado in the province of Huesca.

Martin fired four shots at Premier Canalejas as he was entering the ministry of the interior to attend a cabinet meeting. Two of the shots struck the statesman behind the right ear and he fell dead on the spot. The assassin was twenty-eight years old and an anarchist.

Senor Canalejas belonged to a wealthy and prominent family. He came to the front in political life only in 1900, when he took a leading part in the campaign against clericalism. He had, however, taken great interest in politics as a student and public speaker for many years before that. At the age of twenty-five he became a member of the Spanish parliament, attaching himself to the advanced liberal section.

He became a member of Premier Sagasta's cabinet in 1902 as minister of agriculture. He introduced many reforms, especially in regard to the working classes, and eventually created a department of labor.

When he was asked in February, 1910, by King Alfonso to form a ministry the request caused a great sensation, as it was the first time in the history of Spain that an advanced radical had been placed at the head of the ministry. His cabinet has since undergone many changes, but he has always retained the leading place. He had much to do with the signing of the agreement between Spain and France on the question of the future of Morocco, which was recently satisfactorily settled.

Funeral Monday.

The funeral services of Miss Eunice Brown who died Saturday at her home in Freetown, were conducted from the residence Monday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Rust of the Methodist church. The remains were brought to Seymour and buried in Riverview cemetery. Miss Brown was 21 years old and was the daughter of the late John Will Brown.

Court Notes.

O. H. Montgomery presided as special judge at Brownstown Monday and heard exceptions to the final report in the estate of James Findley. After hearing the evidence, the matter was taken under advisement and a decision will be rendered later.

A half century ago in a Massachusetts town Rice & Hutchins commenced in a small way to make shoes, good shoes, good shoes only. They put their name on them and stood back of them. The people bought and found they got better service than they had been getting—Result constant patronage. Presently they had to enlarge their factory in order to turn out more shoes for which they had found a demand, this demand increased until today they operate eight large factories making shoes for every member of the family. The people are so used to being cheated that when they find an honest man they make him rich. Rice & Hutchins became rich and the business they founded is of the greatest in history.

PAYING CASH

Most Property Owners Are Paying Their Improvement Bills.

Monday was the last day for payment on most of the recently improved streets, North Chestnut, South Walnut and Ewing north of Seventh street. On these three streets eighty-five per cent. of the property owners paid cash for the improvement, only a small per cent. taking advantage of the Barrett law, which provides for payment annually for ten years with interest bearing bonds issued against the property. These bonds become a lien on the property, and most of the residents along these streets preferred to keep the title to their property clear. In case they wished to dispose of their property, or encumber it in any other way, they have it free from any street improvement lien, which if once placed on the property covers a period of ten years or until the principal and interest is paid off.

EUROPE SEEKING A WAY OUT OF IT

No Disposition to Let Slip the Dogs of War.

LEASH HELD BY COOL HANDS

General Diplomatic Representations Among the Powers Likely to Be Drawn Into Turko-Balkan Imbroglio Are Becoming of a More Mutually Conciliatory Character and It Is Believed the War Cloud Will Pass.

Rome, Nov. 12.—The government has issued a semi-official statement to the effect that despite the Austro-Serbian conflict regarding Albania and a port for Serbia on the Adriatic sea, a complete accord exists among the powers on the proposition that the principle of nationality should regulate the final settlement of the Balkan situation. The same applies to the Albanian question; hence the unanimous and disinterested efforts of the powers will undoubtedly bring forth a satisfactory solution.

Constantinople, Nov. 12.—There has been fighting in the neighborhood of the Dardanelles forts. The number of the enemy and its nationality is not known. The enemy advanced against the forts and was met by a force which issued from the fortifications. The Turks repulsed the invaders.

Constantinople, Nov. 12.—There are today 14,000 persons sick and wounded in the capital. There are 18,000 refugees who fled here before the advance of the Bulgarian army, and among them smallpox is breaking out.

London, Nov. 12.—All the chancelleries of Europe have been set astir by news that Serbia has come to the Adriatic. It means that within a very short time the diplomats who hitherto have stood as far aloof as they dared from the Balkan outbreak must now decide just the part that Europe is to play in the struggle between the allies and the Turks.

For Serbian troops have marched across a country over which Austria has ever kept an eager eye. Her interests in Albania have always been very intense, and between Belgrade and Vienna there are constant exchanges of diplomatic messages in an attempt on both sides to find out how the other stands.

Diplomatic Negotiations.

From the tone of Austria's newspapers it now seems as though Austria would insist upon the integrity of Albania, unrestricted facilities for access to the eastern markets and free transit for commerce to Salonika. Austria will in all probability insist upon the protection of her interests by creation of local relations with Serbia.

At Belgrade the Austrian minister, Baron Von Ugson Abranfalva, had a long conference with the Serbian premier. At Huda Pest, Dr. Danef, president of the Bulgarian chamber of deputies, is consulting with Austrian diplomats. He has conferred with the German ambassador at Vienna and with Count Von Berchtold, and it is believed that Dr. Danef, who comes directly from an audience with King Peter of Serbia, is the bearer of important proposals in regard to Serbia's claims. If this is so Austria has now what she has waited for before declaring herself.

A Significant Movement.

That Austria regards the Servians' advance to the Adriatic as most serious is evidenced from the report that she had dispatched a steamer to Durazzo on the sea, whither the Serbs are apparently aiming, for the purpose of taking off the Austrian residents in that town.

The general sentiment throughout the chancelleries seems to be that pressure exerted at Vienna, Belgrade and St. Petersburg will prevent any such thing as a general war arising from the fact that Serbia has come for a seaport to the Adriatic.

Schrank Faces Court.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 12.—John Schrank was brought to trial in municipal court today for attempting to kill Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in Milwaukee on the night of Oct. 14. The trial, it is expected, will not last more than three or four days.

CHARLES PAGE BRYAN

Ambassador to Japan Has

MR. BRYAN NOT GOING TO RETURN TO JAPAN

Resignation Rumors Affecting Ambassador Confirmed.

Washington, Nov. 12.—At the state department the resignation of Charles Page Bryan, United States ambassador to Japan, is announced. It is said that Mr. Bryan's action is due to injuries received in a carriage accident in Japan which may necessitate his undergoing an operation which would make it impossible for him to return to his post.

In view of reports published about a month ago of rumors of Mr. Bryan's resignation and the announced reasons for it, the formal announcement of his resignation caused much comment here. Early in October, when Mr. Bryan left Tokyo for his home in Chicago, it was reported that he would not return to his post, owing to difficulties with Mr. Knox while the latter was in Japan attending the funeral ceremonies of the late emperor. Nothing could be obtained at the state department to lend the slightest confirmation to any of the reports of friction.

Another suggested explanation of Mr. Bryan's resignation and perhaps a more reasonable one, is that with the prospect of a siege of illness in a hospital ahead of him and a Democratic administration coming in less than four months, he finds it hardly worth while to plan to return to Japan for a few weeks only.

LAYING PLANS

Several Aspirants For State Speakership Appear in Field.

Indianapolis, Nov. 12.—Representatives Homer L. Cook and W. W. Spencer of this city, Joseph M. Cravens of Madison, Mark Storen of Scottsburg, M. C. Thornton of New Albany, and John Isenbarger of North Manchester, are the names thus far mentioned in connection with the speakership of the house at the coming session of the legislature.

The selection of the speaker of the house will be made at a Democratic caucus the night before the opening of the session of the legislature.

THEY CAME BACK WITH EYES OPEN

Ohio Men Explode Dream of Sudden Wealth.

VISITED MYTHICAL GOLCONDA

Investigators of the Reputed Fabulous Riches of Brazilian Diamond Mines Will Do Their Part Toward Preventing the Further Enrichment of Promoters Who Are Reported to Have Cleaned Up Millions in Recent Years.

New York, Nov. 12.—A committee composed of Robert L. McCabe, a wealthy retired lawyer of Columbus, O.; R. W. Gilchrist, a business man of Lebanon, O.; Louis S. Noble, a well-known mining engineer of Denver, and R. W. Richards, a civil engineer of Baltimore, have just returned from Brazil, where they went to investigate the Minas Giraes diamond fields. They told District Attorney Whitman and their friends how unprofitable the diamond fields of that republic are.

Altogether it is believed that between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000 has been poured into the ancient diamond fields of Brazil in the last twelve years by investors. England easily has been first with its promotions and companies that have come to naught or are coming to that condition, while the United States and Canada are about even.

New York city is on the list of American cities with three or four investments at least; Chicago has had several. Milwaukee paid tribute, and so did Pittsburgh. Wellville, N. Y., was struck hard with a company, the heads of which, the Taylor brothers, are now down there penniless. In Columbus, O., is another syndicate that will soon know that their purchases went to naught. Worcester, O., will receive the same sad news. One or two companies in the west will perhaps acknowledge that they made a mistake, and another company, of San Francisco, will rejoice that it had the forethought to send a practical miner down in the country about the same time as the McCabe syndicate and the others. McCabe came back determined not to recommend investment.

The methods employed to get capital to buy options and to start companies is the ancient one of having samples of the gravel assay higher than the rest of the gravel. Mr. Noble, who was in South Africa for some years, and Mr. Richards, who has had experience all over the country, characterize it by the shorter and uglier term of "salting." That and the fact that the promoters of the various companies and the exploiters of the country have been aided in some mysterious way by flattering publications issued by the United States government, brought forth the money. These publications, the near victims say, declared that there was a revival of diamond mining in the old state of Minas Giraes; that fabulous sums were being made and that many companies were reaping rich profits. What particularly sticks in the minds of the Ohio men is that photographs purporting to show great dredges at work in the Joquitonba river were photographed from a dredge placidly working at Oroville, Cal.

Mr. McCabe said he regarded the trip as a great joke on himself and his friends, but at the same time he was determined that there should be no more jokes.

"As a matter of fact, as far as the Minas Giraes diamond fields are concerned, our engineers have discovered that it is absolutely worthless," he said.

WRIT DENIED

General Mena and Son Kept in Custody of Uncle Sam.

Panama, Nov. 12.—The supreme court of the Panama canal zone has rendered a decision denying the application for writs of habeas corpus for the release of General Luis Mena and his son Daniel. Both the general and his son were captured by the United States marines in Nicaragua just before the collapse of the insurrection against the Nicaraguan government. General Mena, who was formerly Nicaraguan minister of war, was at the head of the revolt.

After the capture of the two men they were brought to the canal zone on American warships and confined in the United States hospital at Ancan, the general suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

WILSON'S MIND OPEN ON TARIFF QUESTION

Will Give Ear to Every Worthy Suggestion.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 12.—By reading the published interviews of those senators, representatives and men of affairs who have stated their opinions as to the advisability of calling an extra session of congress immediately after his inauguration on March 4, Governor Wilson has indicated his intense interest in the country-wide discussion of the tariff problem. He thinks that this is no question that may be settled offhand; that its ramifications are fraught with vast importance to the intricate business system of a nation; and that its settlement depends on the consensus of ideas of a great number of men competent to judge of what is for the best interests of the people at large. Facing such a situation, he is determined that his mind shall be open to every worthy suggestion.

Some of the interviews given have suggested as much as they stated, and it is the intention of the governor to summon a conference of those men whose opinions must be highly regarded, both for the character of the men and the nature of the interests they represent. The governor said that it is not his intention to make any announcement whatsoever regarding the tariff situation until he has returned from the vacation on which he will start Saturday.

The governor received a delegation of citizens from his boyhood home in Columbia, S. C., headed by Mayor W. H. Gibbs. James Woodrow, the governor's cousin, who is a professor at the University of South Carolina, was a member of the delegation. It called on him to inform him that citizens of the state have purchased the old Wilson home and have arranged to place it at the disposal of the president-elect during the winters of the next eight years. They want him to spend his winters there after he becomes president. The house in question was built by Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, the father of the governor. Governor Wilson said he thought his going there was an ideal suggestion and the embodiment of a very pretty sentiment.

His Quest Was Fruitless.

Washington, Nov. 12.—White House police arrested a man who said he was Jeff Dowdell, because of his persistent attempts to see the president. He said he was a miner of Silver Wood, Ind., and added that he walked to Washington. He wanted the president to confer with James Bryce, ambassador from Great Britain, to devise plans for reducing the high cost of living. He had several papers covered with rambling sentences. He is being held pending inquiry as to his sanity.

Madame Marcellia Sembrich, the noted coloratura soprano, was taken suddenly ill at Richmond, Va., and was unable to fill a concert engagement.

DRAMATIC TALE TOLD ON STAND

Ortie McManigal Testified In Federal Court.

DYNAMITER'S HORRID STORY

Chief Witness For the Government in Big Trial in Progress at Indianapolis Gave in Detail His Operations as a Dynamiter, Culminating in His and the McNamara's Arrest, His Confession and Resultant Indictments.

Indianapolis, Nov. 12.—Ortie E. McManigal, the self-confessed dynamiter, told a dramatic story on the witness stand in the dynamiting cases, and it was listened to with rapt attention by judge, jury, attorneys and the largest crowd of spectators that has yet visited the courtroom.

The witness gave in detail his operations as a dynamiter, culminating in the arrest of himself and the McNamara brothers, McManigal's confession and the indictment of the men now on trial.

The witness began his story with an account of his first use of nitro-glycerine, which was on the Mt. Vernon, Ill., job. The explosion was set off with clocks and batteries. He told of several trips to the addition to the car works in Mt. Vernon being put up by the McClintic-Marshall Construction company. He told of planting two infernal machines in the yards, one at a hoisting engine and the other at a locomotive crane. Both explosions were well planned and very effective, the crane and the engine both being practically destroyed. Hockin came to him in Chicago later and told him he had blown up the wrong job—one at Mt. Vernon, Ind., and not at Mt. Vernon, Ill. The witness insisted that he had blown up the right "jobs," as he had heard the explosions. Hockin, according to McManigal, said they had heard nothing about any explosion at Mt. Vernon, Ill., and he refused to pay him for that work.

While witness was in charge following the Mt. Vernon job, he said J. B. McNamara came to his house and told him about dynamiting the Utah hotel in Salt Lake city, and showed him a Salt Lake city newspaper containing an account of the explosion.

"I came near knocking Brigham Young off the statue," McManigal says McNamara told him.

In June, 1910, said McManigal, he received a telegram from Hockin directing him to go to Cincinnati. He went, he said, and there met Hockin and J. B. McNamara.

"I've got a job for you fellows at Cleveland," the dynamiter said Hockin told them. "It is the Dennison-Harvard viaduct, McClintic & Marshall are putting up." McManigal said McNamara told him also he had some work for them at Pittsburgh and some at Detroit. John J. McNamara, witness said, asked him to go over to Cleveland and follow Hockin's directions, also to go on to Detroit.

June 19, 1910, said McManigal, he and J. B. McNamara left Indianapolis for Cleveland, carrying the twelve quarts of explosive. Arriving there, he said, they put up at the Kennard hotel, under the names of J. B. Bryce and Peter Miller. Sunday afternoon they went out to the Dennison-Harvard viaduct, following directions that J. B. had given.

The next forenoon they took their nitro-glycerine from the hotel and buried it not far from the Dennison-Harvard job. That afternoon they met Hockin in the public square at Cleveland, according to previous arrangements. Hockin then told him that they were arranging a Fourth of July celebration for Detroit.

After making an attack on the Dennison-Harvard viaduct on June 22, J. B. and McManigal went to Detroit. In some way it got noised about that "something was about to happen," and the Detroit job was postponed. On his return to Toledo he said Hockin paid him $100 for the Dennison-Harvard job. The union official, he said, then sent him to Pittsburgh and vicinity to look up several jobs, meeting him there July 1. McManigal's testimony is being continued today.

A SOCIALIST LEADER GIVES UP STRUGGLE

Competitive System Got On Wayland's Nerves.

Girard, Kan., Nov. 12.—Founder and owner of the Appeal to Reason, a Socialist weekly newspaper published here, J. A. Wayland shot and killed himself in his home. Mr. Wayland was unconscious when found by his housekeeper. He died a few minutes later. He had fired a bullet into his mouth, muffling the sound in the bedclothes.

Between the leaves of a book lying on the bed the following note was found: "The struggle under the competitive system is not worth the effort; let it pass."

Friends of Mr. Wayland attribute his act to despondency over the death of his wife, who was killed in an automobile accident a year ago.

Mr. Wayland was born at Versailles, Ind., April 26, 1854. He conducted papers in Pueblo, Col., and Greensburg, Ind.

Mr. Wayland was to have appeared in the federal court in Ft. Scott, Kan., this week to answer to a charge preferred by the government against the several editors and the owner of the Appeal to Reason, of circulating through the mails defamatory matter concerning an official of the federal prison at Leavenworth. The attack was printed in Wayland's paper last winter.

Suicide of a Policeman.

Frankfort, Ind., Nov. 12.—Fred Hacker, a member of the local police force, committed suicide by shooting himself. The act followed a quarrel with his wife and a neighbor woman whom the officer had ordered from his home, she having caused family troubles, it is said, by carrying false tales of his conduct.

He First Confessed.

Brazil, Ind., Nov. 12.—George Mooreland, aged twenty-two, living six miles north of Harmony, committed suicide after confessing to a minister that he had burned a barn and two horses at Perth a few days ago.

Shortening of the Day.

For a long time it has been known that the tides act as a brake on the rotating earth and that they tend to lengthen the day. The effect is, however, so slight that it cannot be measured in any length of time at man's disposal. It may be estimated with the aid of certain assumptions and upon the data available MacMillan has made the necessary computation by the formulae used by engineers. He finds for the increase of the length of the day one second in 460,000 years.—Harper's Weekly.

GROWING OATS

October the Best Month for Planting Oats in the South—Compares Well in Profit with Corn

[By G. H. Alford, of I H C Service Bureau]

From October 1 to November 15, according to latitude, is the best time to sow oats in the cotton belt. The area in oats should be fully as large as that in corn. Great enthusiasm now prevails in regard to corn, but let us not forget that as a feed for stock and cash crop, oats is one of the best crops that can be grown in the south.

The chief crops grown all through the cotton belt are cotton and corn. On an average, for the period from 1900 to 1909, there was planted from ten to fifteen acres of corn for each acre of oats in the various cotton belt states. During the same time, the average value of the oat crop per acre was $10.09, while the average value per acre of corn was $11.02. Figuring the cost of growing an oat crop and a corn crop we find that the oat crop was the more profitable.

There are several important reasons why we should sow millions of acres of oats in the cotton belt. It would reduce washing and leaching to the minimum, furnish grazing, add to the deplorably deficient supply of humus, and add to the always short supply of feed stuffs.

Of course, there are better winter cover crops than oats. Burr clover and crimson clover and the vetches, and in some cases some of the other winter cereals are better. We do not claim that oats alone, or that oats and hairy vetch combined should be grown for the sole purpose of supplying a cover crop. However, in view of the fact that oats will grow on poor land, poorly prepared, and that it costs little to seed an acre, it is a good winter cover crop.

Two and one-half acres were planted in oats at the experiment station at Baton Rouge, La., for grazing experiment on September 28. On October 29, seven Poland China pigs, weighing in total 276 pounds, were put on this plot and were given no feed but the green oats during the winter. By February 17 the pigs weighed a total of 568 pounds. There was an average gain of .37 pounds per pig per day for 110 days. From October 29 to January 1, forty-five head of sheep were pastured on this same field. Of this number eight ewes and nine lambs were pastured continuously thereafter until February 17, at which date the lambs averaged sixty-eight days old and weighed 35.5 pounds each. Allowing six cents per pound gained by the lambs, we have a return of $13.40 per acre, plus the pasturage of sheep not considered in the estimate.

The loss of humus from the soil results in decreasing its power to store up and properly supply crops with water. Soils with a liberal amount of humus are capable of more effectively withstanding drought than similar soils with less humus. The oat crop fills the soil full of roots, and the stubble also adds much humus to the soil.

The oat grain is a very valuable feed, especially for young animals, because of the moderately high content of protein and the large amount of ash or mineral matter. Pound for pound, oats are not as valuable for feeding mature animals as corn, four pounds of corn being equal to about five pounds of oats.

In attempting to build up worn out cotton lands we must depend very largely upon the leguminous crops. Now the oat crop is harvested early enough to permit the growing of a leguminous crop. The leguminous crop may be plowed under or it may be used as feed, and the manure returned to the land. If we are going to build up our soils and raise good stock we must grow oat crops and follow with legume crops.

Oats will prove about the best paying small grain crop that can be grown over practically the entire cotton belt. The same soil that will produce one bale of cotton or forty bushels of corn per acre will produce sixty bushels of oats per acre. At an average price that has prevailed for oats during the past five years, the sixty bushels will sell for from $36 to $40 and the straw when baled will often pay for growing the grain.

After using the disk harrow to cut the corn stalks or cotton stalks, plow the land deep, then disk and double disk and harrow and cross harrow until every inch of the soil has been stirred and broken as fine as possible.

A mixture of 300 pounds of sixteen per cent acid phosphate, 100 pounds of cotton seed meal, and 200 pounds of potash, followed in March with a top dressing of fifty to seventy-five pounds of nitrate of soda per acre, is good fertilizer for oats on average soil.

The best varieties for fall sowing in the south are of the red rustproof type. The original red rustproof, the Applier and the Bancroft, are so nearly alike that no one can tell them apart if sown side by side. The Burt apt is for spring sowing.

There are three methods commonly practiced in planting oats—sowing broadcast, open furrow, and drilling. Drilling of the seed is to be preferred, since considerably less seed may be used if drilled by machine; the seeds are covered at a uniform depth, come up, grow, and ripen uniformly; the small ridges made by the drill afford a slight degree of protection from cold; and the yield from drilled oats is usually greater than from broadcast oats. The seed saved, and the larger crops that usually result from drilled oats will soon pay for a good drill on the farm.

Handsome Trophy for Best Corn.

The American Land and Irrigation Exposition company, whose general offices are in the Singer building, New York city, is offering a handsome trophy, valued at $500, to the farmer growing the best 30 ears of Indian corn of any variety with the largest yield per acre. The corn must be grown in the United States. Rules and shipping instructions and particulars for making entry for the privilege of competing in this contest can be secured by writing Mr. Gilbert McClurg, General Manager of the Exposition, Singer building, New York.

GUMBO SOILS

O. J. Berger, of Eudora, Kansas writes: "I am on gumbo land, and it is not very well drained. I am told this land would improve if properly drained, and some say it can't be tiled, for a paste forms around the tile and the water can't get through it. How would concrete tile do? Can you give me any information on this subject?"

What we usually refer to as gumbo soil is a very heavy type of soil. In some localities it is very dark in color, while in other places it is slightly grayish in color. In the state of Iowa the gumbo soils are very dark and usually very heavy, while in parts of Kansas, also other parts of Iowa, the gumbo is of a light color, often of a reddish cast.

One of the first steps to take in attempting to handle gumbo land is to see that it is well drained. The very close grained, finely textured gumbo soils of Iowa have been drained successfully both by using open ditches and by using tile drain. In fact, some of the gumbo soils that have been tile drained often sell as high as $200 per acre. The experience in handling the heavy, sticky soils indicates that it is not necessary to place the tile, as one would naturally think, close together and as shallow as first consideration might indicate. The experience of farmers in the heavy, waxy soils of Iowa shows that the tile lines are often placed ten to twelve rods apart, which is ample distance even in some other types of soil. The best way to settle this matter, inasmuch as these soils vary considerably, is to put in as many lines of tile as you can conveniently and watch the effect, or use only one tile line and note the distance it drains on either side. This would take but a short time for the effect can usually be noticed on close observation.

It is highly important that you have a good outlet in attempting to use tile. After the land is well drained, the next important step is that of tillage. It has been found that for all kinds of conditions fall plowing is the best for gumbo soils. The action of freezing and thawing during the winter months renders the seed bed much more friable and reduces the clods in a way that cannot be accomplished by mechanical means. Care should be exercised not to plow or to cultivate this type of soil when it is unusually wet for it puddles very quickly, forming clods which can be reduced only by freezing and thawing.

One of the objectionable features of gumbo soil is the tendency to shrink when drying out, thus injuring the crop materially. The time that this occurs is usually during the summer months. This objection may be overcome by surface tillage, using the spring-tooth, peg-tooth or disk harrows, together with cultivators, or any other means of maintaining a surface mulch to a depth of three or four inches.

Gumbo soils when well drained and in a good state of cultivation, which may be maintained as stated above, give splendid yields; in fact, better than some other kinds of soils in the corn belt. A frequent application of stable manure is also beneficial to these soils, inasmuch as it supplies vegetable matter, thus rendering the soil lighter and putting it in a better physical condition.

Some claim that the cement tile are more porous and thus permit a freer movement of the water than the clay tile, but in reality there is very little difference. As far as the pores of the tile becoming filled is concerned, one would probably fill up about as quickly as the other. A large percentage of the water that enters the tile goes through the joints and does not soak directly through the tile. You will find that well vitrified tile or carefully made cement tile will serve your purpose satisfactorily. In cases where the trouble from alkali is exceptionally severe, it may be best to use the clay tile in preference to the cement.

SILAGE

At a farmers' institute not long ago the question was asked: How many housewives have silos? You can very easily guess the nature of the replies to this question, for none of those present had much of an idea what a silo really is. After a short explanation it was agreed that nearly everyone present in reality had a silo of some kind. Some of these were used for saving fruits, corn, and others for preserving cabbage for future use. We don't really speak of these as silos, but the effect on the saving of these beds when placed in jars is the same as it is with corn when stored in the silo; in other words, silage is green corn preserved by storing in an air-tight structure.

There probably are very few farmer boys that do not remember some rainy day or evening when all hands got busy preparing the cabbage to fill the kraut jar. Probably no thought was given the subject because it was a yearly task, and no one realized that in effect the saving of the cabbage by making it into kraut is the same as making corn silage. It undoubtedly served a good purpose in keeping the family in a healthy condition during the winter months when other green food was not available. The same is true of silage, which affords a succulent and nourishing feed for the livestock.

There may be a question as to whether all stock will eat the sour corn silage, but give them a chance and this thought will be quickly dispelled, for all stock eat silage very greedily, and the returns in the form of milk and meat will amply pay for all the trouble and expense.

VEGETABLE OILS

L. O. Miller, Bernardston, Mass., writes as follows: "Could you kindly give me some information about vegetable oils that are used as substitutes for linseed oil? Where, in your opinion, could soy beans and sunflowers be most profitably grown?"

There are various oils to adulterate linseed oil, but we are not aware of any oil that will take its place, or even add anything to its value. It seems that linseed oil is the only one that has ever been found that possesses the proper drying qualities to secure the results desired. Whatever is added to it seems merely to be a detriment.

Soy beans and sunflowers may be profitably grown under some conditions. There are a great many regions where they will grow satisfactorily, and we believe that the middle west or west would perhaps give the best returns, all things considered. In Colorado the Russian sunflower makes a wonderful growth. It is grown quite extensively for feeding chickens.

The soy bean is a crop that will stand a great deal of dry weather, hence is profitably grown on rather dry soils, although it responds to moisture as well perhaps as any other crop. It is grown extensively throughout the south; also some of the hardy varieties are found in the central section.

If you are thinking of coming west with a view to taking up such work as growing these crops, you can get information by addressing any of the state colleges in the west.

You may be able to obtain further information as to vegetable oils by addressing the Indian Refining Co., 17 Battery Place, New York, N. Y., or the Union Petroleum Co., 35 South Second street, Philadelphia, Pa.

LAND DRAINAGE A NECESSITY

Well Drained Soil Will Give Best Returns—Care Should be Exercised in Laying Tile Drains.

Reply to J. C. Tally, Stevenson, Ala. Drainage comes first, if the land needs it, and tile drainage is the modern and sensible way of draining. If the soil is low in humus, stable manure or vegetable matter must be added; if it is lacking in one or more of the elements of plant food, these must be supplied in commercial fertilizer, stable manure and legumes; if it is sour, an application of lime is necessary; if the soil is compact and there is a hard pan, deep plowing must be done. But if it needs drainage, stable manure, commercial fertilizer, vegetable matter, lime, and deep plowing will be of little avail.

There are many thousands of acres of land that are dry enough to induce farmers to try to farm them and are wet enough to scak all the profit out of cultivating them. Drainage on such soils is very urgent.

Drainage may be very simple or a very complex problem. It may require exact engineering so that every available inch of fall may be utilized or the location of the tile may be so apparent that the average practical farmer can easily locate it with the eye. Between these two extremes there are cases requiring varying degrees of skill.

If it is a complicated proposition the services of a reputable engineer should be secured; if there are merely wet spots in your field, or if your field is wet with plenty of fall, you should be able to locate and lay your tile with no difficulty by following the methods outlined in the Uniontown, Alabama, Canebroke Experiment Station bulletins, Numbers 3, 5, 6, and 10. Be sure that no mistake is made in tiling your land. Tiling land is expensive and should be done right.

FARM CROPS

Stable Manure Supplies Many Plant Food Elements and Adds Humus to the Soil—Calcium Should be Applied

Howard Eldridge, Porterville, New York, writes as follows: "I am a farmer living in Erie county, New York. The soil raises very good crops in everything excepting wheat and oats. The average yield of this grain for the past few years has been fifteen or twenty bushels to the acre, as compared to fifty bushels to an acre a few years ago. How can this land be improved?"

The principal plant food elements are nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, and calcium. These are necessary for the production of crops. If any one of these elements is deficient, it will mean that the crop production will be lessened. Continuous cropping without rotation, combined with poor cultivation, is bound to result in decreased yields.

The nitrogen can be replenished by growing leguminous crops, such as clovers, cowpeas, soy beans, vetches, etc. Also, by applying stable manure, or plowing under a legume as a green manuring crop. By doing this you not only supply nitrogen to your soil, but you improve its physical condition by adding vegetable matter.

Very few soils require potassium. This is especially so of sandy soils, although if the soil is not in good physical condition, the potassium may not be available, but if you supply the vegetable matter either in the form of green manure or stable manure, it will tend to make the potassium available.

It may be necessary to supply phosphorus in the form of a commercial fertilizer, which may be done by using finely ground phosphate rock, providing the soil is in the proper physical condition. The phosphate rock will cost you only about half as much and contains practically twice as much phosphorus as acid phosphate. The best way of handling rock phosphate is to spread it in the stables with the bedding or to scatter it on the manure pile. The decaying of the stable manure will tend to render the phosphorus available.

The other principle element, which is especially important if you expect to grow leguminous crops such as clover and alfalfa, is calcium. This may be supplied by the use of finely ground limestone rock. The need of calcium is shown by the presence of horse sorrel, and the failure of legumes to grow.

There is another way of determining the acidity of the soil or the lack of calcium by the use of litmus paper, which may be purchased at any drug store. Place the moist soil around the litmus paper for ten or fifteen minutes. If the blue paper is turned to a pinkish or reddish color, it will indicate that your soil requires lime. Finely ground limestone may be applied at the rate of from one to eight tons to the acre, depending upon how badly your soil needs calcium, but the usual application varies from one to four tons. The other factors which enter into crop production are the selecting of good seed and the preparing of the soil. It is possible that the seed that you are using has become somewhat run out and needs to be replaced by pure seed. Combine with this the preparation of a good seed bed—which is very important in order to obtain a satisfactory yield of small grain.

HARVESTING ALFALFA

Reply to John McGeary, Canehill, Arkansas

"Can you tell me when to cut alfalfa so as not to injure the succeeding crop? When is the best time to harvest red clover for hay?"

The usual practice is to cut alfalfa when about one-tenth of the plants are in bloom, and if cut at this stage there will not be so much danger of injuring the next crop as if permitted to stand longer. From the standpoint of feeding value it will not depreciate to any extent until the field is practically in full bloom.

Red clover should be harvested when the plants are in bloom. If cut before this time it will be difficult to cure because of the amount of moisture the clover contains when green, while on the other hand, if permitted to stand too long, the leaves will break off when curing, also the stems will become more fibrous and coarse, thus decreasing the quality of the hay.

If any machine gave trouble, or is not up to date, you can hardly afford to store it and try to "get along" with it another year. Investigate the new machines advertised, and you will be surprised at the improvements.

See that sheds are in good shape to protect the stock that are in the pasture. The first storms do stock more damage than later ones because they are not accustomed to them.

Colors of Heated Steel.

Heated steel at a temperature of 420 degrees F. takes the color of pale straw; at 450, a darker straw color; at 480, a still darker straw tint; at 500, a nut brown; at 530, a purple shade; at 580, a bright blue tint; at 590, a deep blue; at 640, a blackish blue. When the required tint is produced, indicating the temperature, the steel is at once plunged into water.

It Depends.

"Yes, smoking is an expensive habit. When one gives his friends cigars all the year round his loss is no little one."

"Do you mean in cigars or friends?"

Don't Be Asleep

At the Switch!

Don't wait until every present has been handed and shopworn; don't wait until all the good things have been picked out; don't rush into the shops at the very last minute, out of breath and out of patience, and grab the first thing you see; don't get the idea that Christmas giving properly done is a hurry up, haphazard enterprise.

REMEMBER—the big crowd that shops at the last minute.

REMEMBER—how hard it is to be waited on.

REMEMBER—how utterly impossible it is for even a well organized store to guarantee that your presents will be delivered on time when you yourself delay your Christmas shopping until Dec. 24.

Put on Your Coat and Hat and Do Your Christmas Shopping at Once.

Worse Than Mad.

"A friend and I once passed a theater in Washington," said an old time actor, "just as the performance had let out. My friend met an acquaintance who was coming out of the theater. We were ignorant as to the attraction, so my friend asked his acquaintance what sort of a performance he had been witnessing. 'Hamlet,' said the acquaintance. 'Ah, 'Hamlet,' said my friend. 'I suppose that you are now filled with all sorts of conjectures as to whether Hamlet was really mad.' 'The Hamlet tonight,' said the acquaintance, 'left no doubt on that point. He was not alone mad. He was frantic. There weren't a hundred people in the house.'"

The Scented Court.

"The scented court" was the name by which the court of Louis XV. was known throughout Europe on account of the rage for perfume which then prevailed in France. The expenditure of Mme. de Pompadour for this one branch of her toilet amounted to $100,000 annually. It became the fashion for the host or hostess of a great entertainment to signalize to their guests what particular perfume was to be employed for scenting their rooms on the night for which the invitations were issued, and they were expected to use no other, so that the delicate effect of a unity of odors might be produced. At court a different perfume was presented for each day of the week.

Is your husband cross? An irritable, fault finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A man with good digestion is nearly always good natured. A great many have been permanently cured of stomach trouble by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all dealers.

POTENT LITTLE THINGS.

Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams. A helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of the ship. A bidle bit is a little thing, but see its use and power! Nails and pegs are little things, but they hold the parts of large buildings together. A word, a look, a frown, are all little things, but powerful for good or evil.

The Past and Present

Keep abreast with the times. We are not living in the stage-coach decade, at which time the mentioning of flying machines would have been taken as an idle jest. In the present century you wouldn't think of traveling as one did in by-gone days. Neither would you having your shoes repaired by the old style hand method way, if you knew the superiority in our up-to-date machine way of repairing.

THE MEANING OF THE UNREST.

When Woodrow Wilson assumes the presidency next March he will have before him a task of large proportions. So much has been said and done to create dissatisfaction and unrest among our people that it will be difficult to satisfy the demands and yet do justice to all. Many have adopted the idea that the government can make them moderately rich, if it will, without any regard to their personal thrift and industry. Such will continue to be disappointed. One feature of present social conditions is discussed in an editorial in the Cincinnati Enquirer from which the following paragraphs are taken:

"To any one looking below the surface it must be apparent that the confusion and upheaval which have been in evidence in the political field are indications of tendencies and conditions much more far reaching than those involved in ordinary political issues. They stand for something much more than a mere question of which party is to administer the Government, or whether we are to have a high or low tariff or none at all, or whether even our form of government is to be greatly modified. Unquestionably underneath it all is the aspiration on the part of the great masses of the people not only for a larger share in the comforts and good things of life, but for the extension of good will and human brotherhood and for the development and employment of all those influences and agencies which tend to make life worth living and enjoyable for every one.

"It is well for us all, without reference to what party or sect or race we belong to, to set ourselves at work to bring about the desired result gradually and quietly, for if it does not come in that way it will come with a cataclysm. In nature and in history we find both methods have been at work, and we seem to be at one of those turning points where it lies with us to choose which of the two methods of modifying our social fabric shall be brought into use. If we avail ourselves of the means at our command it may be quiet and gradual; if, on the other hand, we simply stand by and allow things to drift a violent upheaval is probable.

"What, then, is it that we must do if we are to mold and control the form which our social development is to take? Clearly, something more than merely shifting and changing our political machinery, by means of primary, initiative, referendum and recall, or an income tax, or direct elections of Senators, or curbing the trusts, or lowering the tariff, upon which the politicians lay such stress. Thinking people know that social justice and well-being cannot be secured by shifting political machinery or by electing this, that or the other man, though large numbers of voters have been misled into believing that they can.

"Recognizing the existence of this active, pervasive unrest and demand for change, what must we do to meet it in such a way as to prevent a serious clashing of interests? Business is business and is going to remain business, but it is going to be necessary to recognize and consider more than has been done the individual human unit and the welfare of the whole as determined by his status. There must be a voluntary revision of the basis on which the joint production of capital and labor is divided. It is against the best interests of both that wages should be forced down to the lowest point at which, as a purely economic proposition, laborers can be hired. All employees should be paid enough to support them and their families in decency and comfort, and with the ability to save something, provided they are thrifty and industrious, and employers should regard these essentials and not the lowest rate they can secure in making their contracts. Society can better afford to pay more for what it consumes than to live under the constant menace of a laboring class under paid, underfed and dissatisfied.

"This program can be carried out without any resort to violence, and we need not ally ourselves to any party, or turn Socialists, or throw overboard the Constitution and representative government, the only safe guarantee of our lives, liberties and rights, in order to accomplish it.

"It only requires individual intelligence and good will, determined purpose and wise organization and co-operation. With them we can be sure, without any upheaval, of conditions of happiness and prosperity in the future far above any which the human race has ever experienced."

FORGER OF SCOTT

COUNTY LOCATED

lbs. in debt (about $2,000). I would like, if you will, to let his family know of his condition and whereabouts, also to let me know any information regarding his correct name, age, place of birth, etc. In case of any change in my address will you address any reply to,

MRS. JOHN KELLY,
Care American Consul, Equitable buildings, Collins street, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.

Calvert was an extensive lumber and timber dealer, having numerous saw mills in Indiana and Kentucky. He also conducted a brick and tile mill in Scottsburg. His transactions were very large and he handled a great deal of money. During his last few years in Scottsburg, he began drinking heavily, spending money very freely at all times. Gradually he became reckless in his money matters and it is said started a system of "kiting" checks, which was as novel as it was successful. He would start by writing a check on a bank in which he had no funds, in another city. He would wait a day, then write another check on another bank in another city, and use his check to cover the one on the first bank. After waiting another day, he would again write a check on some other bank to cover the last check written. In this way he could gain time until one of his investments or lumber sales would materialize, when he would pay off the last check, thus balancing the line of "kited" checks throughout the country. It is also alleged as a further protection in the use of this system, Calvert had his residence telephone connected to the only long distance phone in Scottsburg, and when banks of another city would attempt to get in communication with the Scottsburg banks to ascertain the value of the Calvert checks, Calvert would himself answer the telephone, and talking as though he was a member of one of the local banks, would tell the foreign bank that Calvert's check was as "good as old wheat in the mill" or "good as government bond." Immediately after such a conversation he would hasten to cover the check of the suspicious bank, with a check on some other bank, finally cashing out when he received enough actual money to cover the last check.

Calvert left Scottsburg on the night of July 13, and on August 3, 1907, the doors of the Peoples' State Bank of Brownstown closed, and when the vaults were opened $7,000 of worthless Calvert paper was found among the wreckage of the ruined bank. It was alleged that the Calvert notes in the Brownstown bank were forgeries, and that the other officers of the bank had no knowledge of their presence there. It was reported that Calvert and Hugh Burrell worked together but this was never proven.

A number of banks in Southern Indiana were heavy losers on Calvert's speculations. The losses to banks alone was estimated to be in the neighborhood of $18,000, although it was claimed that he left accounts and other obligations which would reach a total of $35,000. Much of this has been a matter of conjecture, however, as accurate figures on many of the losses were never obtainable, due to the fact that some of the people defrauded were his friends. At the time of his departure he was building a gravel road in Ripley county, this being a side line of his other business. His bondsmen, most of them being Scottsburg people, finished the roads which he had left unfinished, this item alone costing them several thousand dollars. The Scott County Bank was one of the heavy losers.

Calvert was a man who was well liked in business and he had a great many friends throughout this section. His methods were novel and decidedly original at that time. His scheme for getting in telephone communication with banks on which he had written worthless checks was very daring and was successfully conducted until the time of his departure.

Owing to the man's present condition it is not likely that the Scottsburg authorities will take any steps to have him returned to America. All of the persons mentioned in the letter are genuine. His brother, Bert, was injured in a sawmill accident about five years before Calvert left Scottsburg, the accident leaving him slightly crippled. The Noble Williams referred to was Noble Williams, who worked for Calvert many years as a sawmill foreman. Drs. McClain and McClain are practicing physicians at Scottsburg. Some time ago a clew was received that Calvert was in Fisherville, Ky., but the report was never confirmed until the above letter was received. It is evident from the letter that Calvert has mentioned there for information, receiving from the officer mentioned the Scottsburg clew. Calvert's first wife was granted a divorce several years ago. It is believed that the letter which

If the date was 10-4-12 instead of 4-10-12, the time would be much nearer correct for mail between Australia and Indiana. The Australian postmark date is slightly blurred and cannot be read. A few people who have seen the letter say that it is written in Calvert's own handwriting but this belief is generally discredited.

SOIL IMPROVEMENT

Movement Started to Employ Men as Farm Experts and Advisers.

In Clay county, Illinois, an association has been organized which will attempt to raise $5,000 to employ a county farm expert and adviser. The farmers, bankers and business men of that county are quite enthusiastic and are taking an active interest in the movement. About one hundred and fifty persons were present at the first meeting, and of these about one hundred and twenty-five were directly interested in farming.

McHenry county, Illinois, is moving in the same direction and arranging to employ a farm expert for that county. DeKalb county, Illinois, has already employed a man for this purpose.

These organizations and the employment of these specialists are along the line which wide awake farmers are recognizing as the most important movement in farm life. The value of land has increased until the value of the product taken from the soil must be increased if the land is to pay a reasonable profit on the investment. It is only a question of time in all the wide awake communities until the farmers shall take steps for the improvement of farm conditions.

Much has been done along this line in Indiana by farmers' institutes and by courses of instructions for farmers, but the employment of an expert adviser, who gives his whole time to this work, is a new feature in the development of farm life, and one which should bring large results in every county where it is tried.

Monday night at the Church of the Nazarene we listened to a wonderful sermon, the subject was "The Signs of the Times." Rev. Harding is preaching great sermons, and each one is better. One young lady, a high school student, was converted, and five requests were made for prayer. The afternoon services were well attended Monday and a burden for lost souls was upon the people. The children's revival was excellent and much interest manifested by them. Services each afternoon at 2:30 and 4 o'clock. Don't miss this opportunity of hearing a man for whom God has done so much. # The War Fifty Years Ago

The Federal Army of the Potomac Marches Toward Rappahannock River--The Blue Ridge Mountains Separate the Opposing Forces of McClellan and Lee. Daily Encounters Between the Cavalry Outposts. President Lincoln Orders a New Commander For the Army of the Potomac--General A. E. Burnside Supersedes General George P. McClellan In the Midst of a Campaign--Excitement Among the Troops.

By Captain GEO. L. KILMER, Late U. S. V.
THE first week in November, 1862, found the late antagonists in Maryland playing a new game on the checker-board of war. Lee's Army of Northern Virginia on retreating from the Potomac line after its defeat at Antietam marched into the Shenandoah valley, "covered," in the military sense, by the Blue Ridge mountain range. The Federal Army of the Potomac, still under the leadership of General George B. McClellan, was marching on the opposite or eastern side of the mountains in the direction which Lee must necessarily take on retiring from the valley, an inevitable move under the circumstances.

Lee's movements were further "covered" by the skillful handling of 2,000 cavalry by General "Jeb" Stuart. Retiring before a superior foe, Stuart's troops made a brief stand at every gap before him. But to make sure that Lee should not get the advantage the main part of his army was headed in the direction of the upper Rappahannock.

This movement in effect placed the Army of the Potomac between the two halves of the Army of Northern Virginia, farther separated by the Blue Ridge, for Lee, with Longstreet's corps, had moved to Culpeper, south of the Rappahannock, as soon as it was seen that McClellan was advancing east of the Blue Ridge, and Jackson was still in the Shenandoah, distant several days' march.

Lincoln Removes McClellan.

On that very day, Nov. 5, the president with his own hand wrote the following order:

Executive Mansion, Washington.
By direction of the president it is ordered that Major General McClellan be relieved from the command of the Army of the Potomac and that Major General of our visit. I very pleasantly said that I should be glad to learn it. Whereupon Buckingham handed me the two orders of which he was the bearer.

"I saw that both, especially Buckingham, were watching me most intently while I opened and read the orders. I read the papers with a smile, immediately turned to Burnside and said, 'Well, Burnside, I turn the command over to you.'"

The movements of troops that had already been begun were completed on the 8th and 9th at General Burnside's request, but there the execution of General McClellan's plans stopped. Burnside turned to the left and massed his army on the Rappahannock, opposite Fredericksburg; Lee conformed to this movement, called in Jackson, and concentrated on the opposite heights.

On the 10th McClellan bade farewell to the army of the Potomac. As he rode between the lines, formed almost of their own accord to do honor for the last time to their beloved commander, grief and disappointment were on every face and many tears stood in many an eye that had learned to look on war without a tremor.

"History," he said to the officers who crowded around him--"history will do justice to the Army of the Potomac even if the present generation does not. I feel as if I had been intimately connected with each and all of you. Nothing is more binding than the friendship of companionships in arms. May you all in future preserve the high reputation of our army and serve all as well and faithfully as you have served me."

Excitement Among the Troops.

On the 11th, at Warrenton Junction, he entered with his staff a railroad train that was about to start toward Washington. Here there was stationed a detachment of 2,000 troops. They were drawn up in line, and a salute was fired. The men then broke their ranks, surrounded the car in which he was seated, uncoupled it from the train and ran it back, insisting wildly that he should not leave them and uttering the bitterest imprecations against those who had deprived them of their beloved commander.

The scene has been described by an officer who was present "as one of fearful excitement. The moment was critical. One word, one look of encouragement, the lifting of a finger, would have been the signal for a revolt against lawful authority the consequences of which no man can measure. McClellan stepped upon the front platform of the car, and there was instant silence." His address was short. It ended in the memorable words, "Stand by General Burnside as you have stood by me and all will be well." The soldiers were calmed. They rolled the car onward, recoupled it to the train and with one long and mournful huzza bade farewell to their late commander.

In all that these brave men did, in all that they suffered, and great were their deeds, unspeakable their sufferings, never, perhaps, were their devotion and loyalty more nobly proved than by their instant obedience to this order, unwisely wrung from the president as many of them believed it to have been, yet still for them, as American soldiers, as American citizens, as implicit mandate.

General Burnside called a council of the corps commanders present, of whom there were six, and made known some of his plans. He had decided to form greater units by combining two corps under one leader. The army would proceed rapidly to Fredericksburg and there cross the river.

General McClellan had already directed that a train of pontoons for bridging the river be forwarded at once. The boats were then--Nov. 6--in a bridge on the Potomac, near Harpers Ferry. The history of the movement turns on the late arrival of the train. Burnside waited for the boats.

There were but few Confederates in Fredericksburg, and its seizure would have been an easy matter. In fact, neither Burnside nor his generals expected that possession of the town would be disputed.

Other Events of the Week.

While the armies of General W. S. Rosecrans and General Braxton Bragg were maneuvering for the advantage in Kentucky and northern Tennessee a Confederate force was threatening Nashville. General J. C. Breckinridge commanded the troops engaged in the so called siege of this important post. Nashville was indispensable to the Federal plan of campaign in Tennessee and General N. B. Forrest, the vigorous cavalry leader, obtained permission to attack its garrison on Nov. 6. He moved with 4,000 infantry and an equal number of troopers, but just as the advance column engaged the Federal pickets Forrest received a peremptory order to abandon the attack. Ten days later Rosecrans' main army began to march in and Nashville was out of danger.

In Virginia the cavalry which led the march of the Army of the Potomac toward the Rappahannock pushed on to the bank of the river. On the 8th Bayard's brigade reached the railroad bridge near Fredericksburg. Next day the dashing Captain Ulric Dahlgren, at the head of sixty troopers of the First Indiana cavalry, crossed into the town by an obscure and unguarded ford. The place was ostensibly defended by the Fifteenth Virginia cavalry. However, the Virginians were scattered through streets in small groups and a show of discipline. After a brief skirmish with those who disputed the ground Dahlgren rode away with forty prisoners. A Confederate court of inquiry "sat upon" this affair and decided that Dahlgren's easy success was due to the demoralization of the Virginians.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO CAN CROCHET.

Christmas Gifts That May Be Fashioned by Her Needle.

The girl who crochets has a great opportunity to display her skill, especially in this day of beautiful hand work.

A young girl will be delighted to receive a crochet party bag for Christmas. The one illustrated is crocheted of rather heavy cotton and finished at the corners with hand made balls of the cotton.

The bag may be mounted over a lining of silk or satin in any color that is preferred. It is made to accommodate the fan, buttonhook and other dainty trifles that a girl is likely to require at a party or at the dancing class.

Charming For a Young Girl.

In crocheting a bag on this order it is not necessary to adhere to this pattern. Any motif used in Irish crochet may be substituted for the rose shown here. By the use of judiciously adjusted chains re-enforced with rows of double or triple crochet made to look like scallops it may be worked out to form an oblong piece of crochet. This supplies one side of the bag.

Rows of chains or scallops are run around the edge when the two sides have been drawn together with the crocheting needle in a row of single crochet.

To Keep Handkerchiefs Neat.

This little handkerchief case may be made in a short time and will prove a most acceptable gift to any friend, man or woman. It is fashioned of coarse crochet silk. The pattern is a diamond achieved by crocheting a chain of seven and catching it in the center of the chain beneath it.

A square is first crocheted of these chains, and then the sides of the bag are crocheted around and around that. A piece of cardboard padded and covered with silk is tacked to the bottom of the bag. This square is scented and made the same size as a folded handkerchief.

Ribbons are run through the top of the bag so that it may be drawn to gether. Then the handkerchiefs placed inside will be held firmly in place.

Such a bag is a great convenience for the traveler, for the handkerchiefs may be thus compressed into the smallest possible amount of space, and there will be no danger of their wrinkling.

Useful Crochet Cuffs.

Irish crochet cuffs, made with a soft white ribbon are pretty accessories for the traveler. Backs to finish off a pretty neckpiece can also be crocheted. Handkerchief bags to match the Irish belt are also charming, and opera bags are made of lace.

APRONS AS GIFTS.

Attractively Made, They Will Delight the Busy Woman.

This fancy apron will make a delightful gift for the woman who is devoted to her chafing dish or to the one who is fond of fancy work. The three little pockets that can be applied on the points will be convenient for skeins of silk or odd spoons.

Fine lawn was the material used in this case. It was cut in a single piece with the three points below, a handsome beading being run around the out side. The top was slightly gathered to the waist band. The lower part of the apron was cut out of heavy net and finished with a beading and a lace frill. The band that goes about the waist was made of a beading bordered with rows of narrow lace insertion. Ornaments shaped out of the material and shaped bands of it were applied to the net.

An apron work bag may also be made of plain or flowered muslin, with pink or blue ribbons, if destined as a gift for a girl or of silk, satin or brocade if for an older lady.

The apron ties round the waist by means of a ribbon, while the bottom of it is doubled up to form a deep bag, with ribbon run round the slot at the top of it, so that when the wearer stands up suddenly any needlework, scissors or cottons lying in her lap slide into the bag instead of falling on to the ground.

This makes it a specially useful gift for any one who has any nursing, waiting on older people or looking after small children to do.

SWEET SCENTED SACHETS.

Charming Tokens For the Christmas Gift Maker.

Dresden ribbon daintily tinted is used in making this sachet handkerchief cases. The upper part of the case is open so that the folded handkerchiefs may be slipped inside. A plain satin ribbon is used for the lining. The row of tiny satin ribbon roses wreathed around the edge of the heart and the big plain satin ribbon bow at the left are charming embellishments.

A specially pretty and novel handkerchief sachet is very easily made from a twenty-two inch square of flowered silk, interlined with a layer of flannelette, lined with Japanese silk and edged all round with a cord chosen to match the lining.

After the materials have been placed together and one cord sewed on the four corners of the square should be folded to meet in the middle, envelope fashion, while four inches from each point sew a wee bow of ribbon to catch the sides together.

The four points should then be turned back at will as far as the four ribbon bows, allowing ample room for getting handkerchiefs in and out. The effect of the turned back corners, particularly if the lining has been chosen in some pretty contrasting color, is very attractive.

For a large sachet, suitable for a nightdress, a yard of silk measuring not more than twenty-two inches wide in some pretty shade is required, to gether with a yard of soft white silk for lining.

The two yards of silk are laid together, stitched round three sides and then covered on the inside with a thick pad of wadding. If it is the ordinary sheet wadding use three layers. Tack the wadding loosely to the selvage of the silk. The case then is turned right side out and the fourth side slipstitched. The yard strip is divided into three, and two-thirds are sewed up together on either side to form a bag.

The remaining third of the strip is then tied up somewhere about its center with a yard or rather more of wide ribbon to match the colored silk used on the case or, if it is not possible to obtain a good match, with a double strip of the silk itself stitched together to form a ribbon.

The tied up piece of the sachet is finally turned over, so that the white silk lining and the bow lie on the front of the sachet, and the opening is left ready to slip the nightdress in.

GIFTS FOR THE FAIR MOTORIST.

Pretty Headgear and Bags Are Useful Christmas Presents.

Here is a hood easily made and dainty which will prove a useful gift for the feminine motorist, whether she is young or old. It is of cloth in brown and white mixture combined with plain white in basket weave cloth. The white is for the band along the front of the hood and for the flaring angular piece at the back. Cross stitch in coarse silk is used to decorate the cloth at the back and on the sides of the cap. Rosettes of ribbon at the sides are adorned with large square buttons, covered with silk. These, too, are finished off with cross stitch. Ribbon ties fall from the silk rosettes.

Pretty Headgear.

Knitted or crocheted hoods are always acceptable, and each season brings its own particular styles. One requirement of automobiling headgear is that it should be comfortable and stable. Hats, bonnets or hoods that can be displaced by the wind are worse than useless.

For the outdoor girl there is nothing in the way of outfit or accessories that has made such a hit as the knitted wool sets, consisting of cap, muff and scarf.

Automobiling is so popular that most of us have among our friends somebody who motors, and any trifle which adds to the convenience or comfort of the motorist will be greatly appreciated, for such things are not always to be had in the shops.

First Aid For Motorists.

An emergency case, fitted out with adhesive and court plaster, strips of gauze, absorbent cotton, a small bottle of peroxide and a few other simple drugs useful in case of illness or accident may be put up in compact form to be stowed away in one of the pockets of the car, for accidents sometimes happen when it is not possible to get medical help. Then the emergency case has its uses.

A Beauty Bag.

The pretty bag shown here may be carried on the arm. It may be designed in colors to match the motoring garb. Old rose silk faced with green is used for the smart bag illustrated. The flowered part is cut out of a single round piece of silk. The edges are in deep points.

The bag is lined with pale green silk. A casing for a narrow ribbon of pale green to match the lining is run inside the bag. A star shaped section of green silk is stitched to the bottom of the bag, the ends of the tabs being caught to the sides of the bag and finished with tiny bows of ribbon.

This bag was fitted with tiny pockets, into which could be slipped the powder box, extra handkerchief, bottle of smelling salts or toilet accessories likely to be needed on an outing. Among these might be cold cream, a small cake of soap for the hands and tiny comb.

Handmade Veils.

A handsome handmade veil with the owner's initials embroidered on it is a nice gift for the woman who motors. One gift of the sort that cannot but be useful is a set of handkerchiefs rather larger than the ordinary ones for women and with the owner's initials embroidered on a tiny motorcar.

GENERAL A. E. BURNSIDE, SECOND COMMANDER OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

and pass of the mountain range and at every stream and hamlet in the valley, disputing the road with McClellan's cavalry vanguard, led by General Alfred Pleasonton.

On to the Rappahannock.

It was natural that the Confederates should fall back up the Shenandoah valley toward the Rappahannock river in order to shorten the line of communications with Richmond. Sheltered by the mountain wall eastward, Lee might divide his army the better to cover points threatened by McClellan, and the latter kept his own force in hand, ready to penetrate between Lee's divided columns in case he should separate them for any cause whatever.

Pleasanton's cavalry scouts discovered that Lee's infantry was marching southward west of the Blue Ridge as fast as Stuart retired east of the mountains. It was plain that Lee could not be caught in the upper part of the Shenandoah valley. McClellan therefore hastened his columns forward to the center of that vast area lying east of the Blue Ridge between the Potomac and the Rappahannock. By throwing his left wing well to the east McClellan reached out for the Orange and Alexandria railroad as a means of supplying his army. This road brought the needed army stores from Washington to the front.

The Orange and Alexandria railroad crosses the Rappahannock, and, although the track had been destroyed by the Confederates to a great extent, it was in condition for easy repair and would serve the army in case McClellan should advance beyond the Rappahannock toward Richmond. Once the Army of the Potomac was planted on the railroad route McClellan had three plans for the future campaign against Lee from which to choose. He could pass the Rappahannock at Fredericksburg and move upon Richmond direct; he could cross the river north of Fredericksburg and force Lee back toward Gordonsville, thus avoiding the risk of having to attack him on the heights at Fredericksburg; or he could transfer his army to the James river again for attack upon Richmond from the south.

By Nov. 5 McClellan's advance was at Warrenton, near the old battlefield of July, 1861, and August, 1862. With concentrated at that point railroad in working order he had either of the three plans

Burnside take command of that army; also that Major General Hunter take command of the corps in said army now commanded by General Burnside.

That Major General Fitz-John Porter be relieved from the command of the corps he now commands in said army and that Major General Hooker take command of said corps.

The general in chief is authorized in (his) discretion to issue an order substantially as the above, forthwith or as soon as he may deem proper.

A. LINCOLN.

Nov. 5, 1862.

Forthwith the following orders were issued:

Headquarters of the Army, Washington, Nov. 5, 1862.
Major General McClellan, commanding, etc.

General--On receipt of the order of the president, sent herewith, you will immediately turn over your command to Major General Burnside and repair to Trenton, N. J., reporting on your arrival at that place by telegraph for further orders. Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
H. W. HALLECK,
General in Chief.

This order was inclosed:

War Department, Adjutant General's Office, Washington, Nov. 5, 1862.

General orders, No. 182. By direction of the president of the United States it is ordered that Major General McClellan be relieved from the command of the Army of the Potomac and that Major General Burnside take the command of that army. By order of the secretary of war,
E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

General A. E. Burnside In Command

General C. P. Buckingham, confidential assistant of the secretary of war, bore these orders from Washington by a special train. He arrived at Rector town in a blinding snowstorm. First calling upon Burnside to deliver to him a counterpart of the order, late on the night of Nov. 7 these two officers proceeded together to General McClellan's tent. McClellan says:

"I at once (when he heard of Buckingham's arrival) suspected that he brought the order relieving me from command, but kept my own counsel. Late at night I was sitting alone in my tent writing to my wife. All the staff were asleep. Suddenly some one knocked upon the tent pole and upon my invitation to enter there appeared Burnside and Buckingham, both looking very solemn. I received them kindly and commenced conversation upon general subjects in the most unconcerned manner possible. After a few moments Buckingham said to Burnside, 'Well, general, I think we had better tell General McClellan the object

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

A car load of U. S. regular soldiers passed through here this afternoon from Columbus, O. to Fort Cook.

A. W. Bruner, pure food inspector, was in the city yesterday. He visited a number of places and found conditions satisfactory.

Rev. Harley Jackson went to Columbus this afternoon to arrange for a revival meeting which will begin at the Central Christian church Sunday night. He will be assisted by Rev. Mr. Dubber of Bedford.

Frank Himler of Vincennes, is here spending a week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Himler, of Carter street. Frank and his brother, Jesse, have been spending the two days of this week hunting, and have been meeting with good results, bringing in several birds and rabbits each day. Frank will probably remain all week visiting his parents and friends.

Ray Manion met with a painful accident while working in the field near his home in Brownstown Monday afternoon. He pulled back the brake on the wagon he was riding and in jerking it to its place, broke his collar bone. He was removed to his home and given surgical attention. Mr. Manion is a brother of Miss Manion, deputy in the county clerk's office.

R. L. Moseley of Indianapolis was in the city this morning. Mr. Moseley has just closed three large deals in Jackson Co. for Indianapolis property. He has sold the Offutt farm at Crothersville for $15,000.00 to George C. Toner of Indianapolis. Also the Clyde Keach farm west of Crothersville to Alva Harold of Alexandria for $45,000.00 and the George M. Twilling farm at Freetown to Frank Montgomery of Kirkland for $20,000.

This morning a man called at the home of Mrs. Henry Werning and claimed to be in need of help. He had a list of names of persons who are members of the Catholic church and stated that the list had been given him by Father Conrad. Mrs. Werning took occasion to call up Father Conrad, but learned from him that he knew nothing of the man and nothing about his needing help. It is evident that he had secured the list of names from some one and was endeavoring to impose upon some of the citizens by securing aid through misrepresentation.

STORM ANNIVERSARY

Severe Cold Wave and Gale Swept the County a Year Ago Last Night.

Many of our people recall that one year ago last night a severe cold wave accompanied by a severe icy gale swept over the central part of the United States. The temperature went down with a rush and great damage was done in many sections of this county, especially to trees, telephone and telegraph wires.

In Seymour several trees were broken and many limbs blown down. The latter caused considerable trouble to the electric circuits, many of which were cut off on Sunday morning of the 12th. The day, before, Saturday, had been unusually warm, and many doubted the prediction that the cold wave was coming, but with snow on the ground and the low temperature everyone willingly admitted the prediction of the weather bureau. It was during this windstorm that a large square in one of the west windows of the Baptist church was broken in and services could not be held that day in the auditorium.

The storm in this county seemed to be centered about Houston. A two-story, seven room house of John McMahon was completely wrecked. The house was an old structure and seemed to have been literally broken apart. The telephone exchange was in the house and the wires were in such a tangled condition after the storm that telephone communication was impossible. The Christian church at Houston was left in a bad shape after the storm. It had been remodeled and repaired just a short time before, but the storm wrecked the plastering, wrenched the tower loose from the house and did other damage. The chimneys on the Methodist church were blown off, and many slate roofs, fences and covered bridges through the county were either wrecked or badly damaged. A number of poles along the interurban were blown down and traffic was considerably interrupted.

At Waymansville the greatest damage was done to Oscar Tobrocke's property, where fruit trees were blown down and the back porch and much of the roof carried away.

The change in temperature at noon today helped to recall the severe storm of one year ago.

Giving Pa a Treat.

Mr. Smith had the habit of lighting his cigar after dinner, putting it for awhile and then laying it down on the ash tray. Later he would relight it and finish his smoke. Often three or four unfinished cigars would be on the tray.

One day his small son, sitting near by, watched his father light one of the short variety and said:

"How do you like that one, papa?"

"This, my son, is a very good cigar," replied the father, blowing long puffs into the air.

"I thought you'd like it, papa. I found it in the gutter outside."—London Mail.
